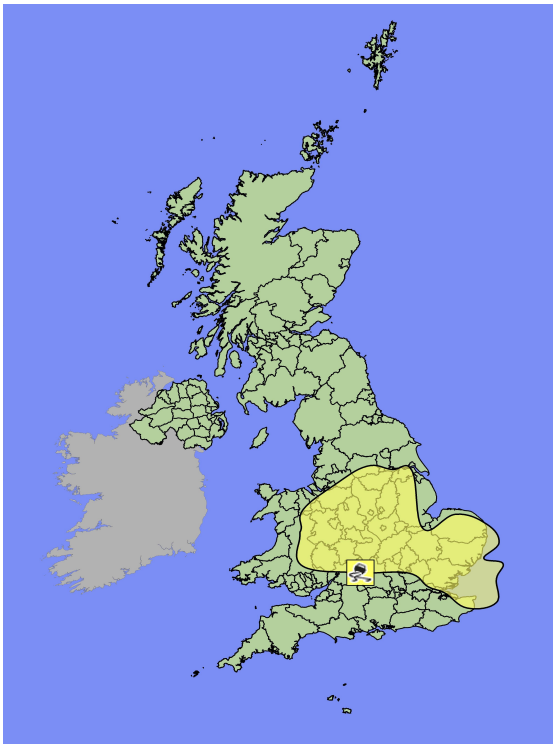
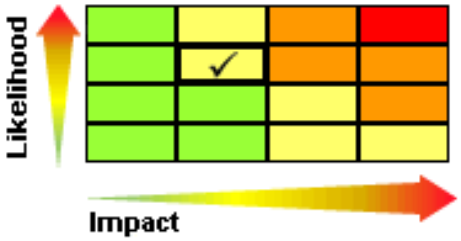
National Severe Weather Warning Service





CANCELLED

Chief Forecasters Assessment
The frontal zone will stall over the UK on Sunday, and is expected to continue to affect southern parts of the UK during Monday as a weakening feature. Associated snowfall on Monday morning is thought likely to be both less extensive and not as heavy as on Sunday. Meanwhile, as this frontal zone moves away to the south, wet roads may well freeze for the morning journey to work.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Ice

Valid from 00:05 on Mon, 11th Feb 2013 until 10:00 on Mon, 11th Feb 2013

Further spells of rain, sleet and snow are expected to affect southern parts of the UK during the early hours of Monday morning before gradually dying out. There is the potential for further accumulations of 1 to 3 cm, especially on higher ground. For the Monday morning rush hour ice is likely to become a hazard and the public should be aware of possible disruption to transport.
